Looking after your home while you are away

Home insurance information for householders choosing residential care

Important - Check your cover

Whether you are considering residential care on a temporary or long term basis, you need to consider the implications on your home insurance policy.

If your home is not occupied on a full time basis, your policy cover may be severely restricted, putting you, your family and even your future care at financial risk.

The most common restrictions are:

- Excluded – Theft and malicious damage
- Excluded - Escape of water / burst pipes
- Excluded – Escape of oil

Some policies might even be voided completely.

Help is at hand

Thankfully, as long as it is dealt with properly, there is no need to worry. By taking a few simple steps, you can ensure that you have the best protection possible for your property and contents.

1. Contact your existing insurer and explain your circumstances.

They may be able to accommodate your new situation. Ask what exclusions apply, insist on written confirmation of these and any conditions you have to meet.

If your policy cover is restricted, you will need to arrange alternative cover.

2. Call Bickers Insurance Services

We can arrange an insurance policy designed specifically to provide you with the cover you need for your home and contents, even when you are not living there.
